gestion of how to solve one of the oldest and most difficult problems in the world, but, alas, it has one fatal defect. It does not provide any way of keeping the wife perpetually young and beautiful, and this is absolutely necessary in dealing with the type of man whose ideal of a perfect home is a place that you can go to whe the curfew rings in the cafes.

The theory that if you teach a girl to dance like a ballerina her husband will fox trot down the years with her without wearying, or that if she knows every move in the game of flirtation that she can keep him always a romantic and sighing lover, is a good one. The only trouble with dancing and flirting is bound to have o'clock.

a change of partners, somebody alpast mistress of both arts.

Equally fallacious is the idea that a man finds coquetry as alluring in marriage it undoubtedly stimulates a man's interest in a girl and his desire for her if she keeps him guessto some other man. But after marriage, trust and faith are essential to domestic peace and happiness, and upon her husband is just his surety of her unfaltering devotion and the knowledge that no matter if all the world turned against him she would stand unfalteringly at his side.

Undoubtedly, however, the masculine moth is eternally attracted by glare and glitter and the girl who is pretty, and showy, and smartly dressed, and who is a good dancer, and who has the best repertoire of tricks and wiles, has men swarming around her like bees around a honey pot, while her prim, demure, domestic, puritanical sister is left to paper the wall, with never a man in tele phoning distance of her.

That's fact No. 1. Fact No. 2 is that although a man may be daught by glare and glitter, he doesn't often desire to spend the balance of his life

"The question has been raised," she says, "as to why these women should not take the substitutes which we are urging American women to try. There are two good answers. Many of them have had their home equipment demolished by the war and are not in a position to try the new things. Also the substitutes deteriorate quickly and are not safe to send for such a long distance and for long keeping."

To help offset the expenses of the food lessons the products that make up the exhibit will be sold to visitors. They are not to be taken away before s o'clock, and it is preferred that they be taken between 8 and 8:30.

NEW BULLETIN TELLS OF OHIA LEHUA TREES

A carefully prepared and well illustrated botanical bulletin of the board of agriculture and forestry, compiled by Joseph F. Rock, consulting botanist, has just been issued from the Star-Bulletin presses. It is devoted to the ohia lehua trees of Hawaii. It is a revision of the Hawaiian species of the genus Metrosideros Banks, with special reference to the varieties and forms of Metrosiderous collina.
